RE : Report on the 2024 Hanna Geldrich-Leffman Colloquium on Language, Literature and Society, "Global Foodways" Dear Members of the Center for the Humanities Steering Committee,

We are happy to report on the 2024 Hanna Geldrich-Leffman Colloquium on Language, Literature and Society, "Global Foodways: The Intersections of Food Politics and Cultural Identity" on April 10, 2024. Our five events were well attended, and student reflection papers on the activities were very positive. The total number of attendees was approximately 200 people.

Below are some comments from students in Dr. Yu Stearns' class about the talk by Dr. Jennifer Lin LeMesurier, "Gut Feelings."

We had no significant changes to our budget. The hotel and food were more expensive than we budgeted for, but the travel was less, so we ended up even.

Dr. Ignacio M. Sánchez Prado, Washington University, "Cultural Density beyond Authenticity: Reflections on the Idea of the Taco"

Dr. Jennifer Lin LeMesurier, Colgate University, "Gut Feelings: The Racial Rhetoric of Asian Food in America"

Dr. Priya Wadhera, Adelphi University, "Hunger: A User's Manual for Post-War France"

Lunch attendance: 20 faculty and students

Speakers attendance: 175 faculty and students

Dinner attendance: Three guests and three faculty

Excerpts from students in Dr. Stearns' classes on the talk by Jennifer Lin LeMesurier, "Gut Feelings: The Racial Rhetoric of Asian Food in America":

"I believe this talk has enhanced my knowledge that I've gained in the classroom because it allows me to grasp the concept of true racial stereotypes that happen with Asian Heritage. I never really realized the amount of stereotypes with Asian food that happen in my life on a daily basis, for example using Asian food in TV shows (especially true crimes) to show that the character was "too busy" to eat "good food". In our class we converse about Asian stereotypes in writings and literature, however this talk allowed me to grasp the concept of these in the real world today."

"the knowledge presented made good sense and explained the issues of racism while incorporating the culture of food to help gain understanding for those who are not educated in the area."

"I enjoyed this talk, and it really opened my mind and gave me some interesting insight on Chinese history and the challenges the Chinese face due to racism perpetuated by the west."

"Yes, it opened my eyes to the rhetorical messages that are present in our society surrounding cultural foods.

Additionally, she discussed the issues surrounding Opium which we touched up on in many stories we read in class."

"She talked about the Chinese immigration timeline, which is something I had never seen before. I also never realized how significant Chinese laborers were to the Transcontinental Railroad."

"the knowledge presented made good sense and explained the issues of racism while incorporating the culture of food to help gain understanding for those who are not educated in the area."
