LOYOLA
UNIVERSITY MARYLAND

Sellinger School of Business

THE SELLER DIFFERENCE

Loyola University Maryland emphasizes reflection, discernment, and ethical commitment, anchored by our Jesuit values and academic tradition. The Sellinger School of Business and Management provides academically challenging graduate business programs that allow students to explore new ways of thinking, integrating knowledge, preparation, leadership, personal and professional development, and experiential learning. Our personalized approach to student success means that faculty and staff meet with students to customize their path in order to meet their professional interests and goals. Loyola graduates emerge from the program prepared for leadership roles in their organization—wherever it takes them—as confident, competent, and credible leaders and ethical and adaptable professionals.

“The ELMBA program gives you the foundation you need for entering a business environment—and it also gives you skills in communication that are helpful for your future success.”

—Katherine Kunkle, MBA '20
Client Service Associate,
Morgan Stanley

“What I appreciate about my Jesuit education is being challenged to see things from different perspectives; there is never a clear-cut way to respond to a question.”

—Arjun Sutha, MBA '17
Financial Analyst, Exelon
